The philosophy of the small group of professionals at IFAD is to extend a different kind of help : self help, No hand-outs but hand-ups to a better life. IFAD's tightly defined mandate focuses sharply on helping small holders, landless laborers and country class men in developing countries to increase their food production. To them, a hoe may be more precious than a tractor, a fishing net more relevant than a deep sea trawler, and a reliable market outlet more important than anything else. Even the world's poorest farmers and fishermen know how to farm or fish. What they lack is the means to do so effectively and profitably. IFAD's role is to help make these means available through low cost, grass root projects designed to reach the maximum number. And against the backdrop of the perilous situation in Africa, it seems suicidal to destroy a well honed weapon against hunger (IFAD = International Fund for Agricultural Development). (2x4=8Wts.)
